About the Southern Cardamom REDD+ Project

The Southern Cardamom REDD+ Project is a REDD+ project that encompasses a Project Accounting Area of 442,871 ha and a Project Area of 493,582.6 ha in the Phnom Kravanh National Park which consist parts of former Southern Cardamom National Park, current Padum Sagar National Park, and Tatai Wildlife Sanctuary, which are protected areas in Cambodia. The project protects a critical part of the Cardamom Mountains Rainforest Ecoregion, one of the Global 200 prioritized locations for conservation on the planet due to its unique biodiversity. The area contains a diverse mosaic of habitats and carries many IUCN listed threatened species. The Southern Cardamom REDD+ Project is also part of the Indo-Burma Hotspot, one of the world's 34 hotspots for biodiversity which functions as a critical watershed for the Gulf of Thailand, in which the waterways support the livelihoods of 3,800 villages in over 6 provinces in Cambodia. The Southern Cardamom REDD+ Project has directly supported the livelihood of 29 villages surrounding the perimeter of the project area, which consist of approximately 4,719 families and around 16,660 individuals.
